the welsh affairs committee considers the impact of the severn crossings toll on the economy of south wales and beyond the severn crossings are seen as a vital link for the people and business located in south wales and beyond in the committee s view while the crossings currently managed by severn river crossings plc bring many valuable benefits including reduced journey times and improved access to customers and suppliers there is a perception that the high cost of the toll represents a barrier to business the committee found that much evidence about the toll s impact is anecdotal and recommends that empirical evidence should be gathered about the economic impact of the toll on both sides of the border the report is also critical that the inflexibility of the severn crossings act does not allow the toll to be reduced without the taxpayer bearing the cost and is disappointed that it has not proved possible for the toll to be frozen for 2011 the report concludes that the end of the concession projected for 2017 provides an opportunity to re examine the pricing policy for the severn crossings the committee argues that once the bridge returns to public ownership and its current debt is paid off the cost of maintenance and toll operation will be a fraction of the current monies raised by the toll charges and concludes that there is a strong case for significantly reducing the cost of the toll measuring the relative likelihood of fatal crash involvement for different types of drivers would seem to require information on both the number of fatal crashes by driver type and the fraction of drivers on the road falling into each category in this paper however we present a methodology for measuring fatal crash likelihood that relies solely on fatal crash data the key to our identification strategy is the hidden richness inherent to two car crashes crashes involving two drinking drivers are proportional to the square of the number of drinking drivers on the road crashes with one drinking and one sober driver increase linearly in the number of drinking drivers imposing a limited set of assumptions e g independence across crashes equal mixing on the roads we are able to estimate both the likelihood of causing a fatal crash and the fraction of drivers of each type on the road our estimates suggest that drivers with alcohol in their blood are at least eight times more likely to cause a fatal crash legally drunk drivers pose a risk at least 15 times greater than sober drivers males young drivers and drivers with bad past driving records are all more dangerous but the impact of these other factors is far less than that of alcohol since the late 1980s the global intellectual property rights ipr system has been strengthening dramatically as much of the developing world introduces patent protection for new drug products this may lead to more research on drugs to address developing country needs as there are identifiable differences in the drug demands of these countries as compared to those already offering such protection the situation offers a unique opportunity to examine the incentive role of patent protection we use new survey data from india the results of interviews with industry government and multinational institutions and measures of r d activity constructed from a variety of statistical sources to determine trends in the allocation of research to products specific to developing country markets there is some although limited evidence of an increase in the mid to late 1980s which appears to have leveled off in the 1990s in interpreting the trends we examine factors that might enhance or dampen a firm s responsiveness to the availability of product patents the picture presented here provides a baseline against which future research activity can be compared once the new global patent regime is fully established and uncertainty about its implementation is resolved in this paper i analyze a variety of evidence for japan and where available for the united states on bequest practices on the importance and nature of bequest motives on bequest division on the willingness of individuals to help others etc in order to shed light on which model of household behavior applies in the two countries my results suggest that the selfish life cycle model is the dominant model of household behavior in both countries but that it is far more applicable in japan than it is in the u s that the dynasty model is also more applicable in japan than it is in the u s but that it is not of dominant importance even in japan and conversely that the altruism model is far more applicable in the u s than it is in japan
